DELIBERATED BY
SUPREME COURT

Appeal Is in Case of Roman and Anna Soboleski, Warminster Twp.

HEALTH COMPLAINTS
800 Pigs Were Fed Garbage
Hauled from Phila.,
It Is Stated

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 14.—(INS)—The Pennsylvania Supreme Court was generating today on the appeal of Roman and Anna Soboleski, of County Line Road, Warminster Township, Bucks County, who were enjoined by Common Pleas Court of Bucks County from maintaining a piggery in a manner contrary to the provisions of the law and the regulations of the State Department of Health. Arguments in the case were presented yesterday.

One of the chief complaints placed against the piggery by the State health officers was that it is close to the banks of a small branch which empties into the Pennypack Creek near Bethayres. The Philadelphia & Suburban Water Company, it is averred, pumps water from the creek which is sold to the public.

Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, substituting in the Bucks County Court last February, handed down a decree restraining the Soboleskis because their pig pens did not have concrete floors or floors of other impervious material to prevent seepage, and because they allowed manure and garbage to accumulate where it may be a source of fly breeding or may affect a source of drinking water and become a menace to public health. The lower court held that in violating the health department regulations the piggery was a nuisance and ordered an abatement.

In the appellate court, in the argument on appeal, counsel for the farmer and his wife sought to maintain that violations of the health regulations of the Commonwealth did not in themselves amount to a nuisance.

Counsel for the Commonwealth, on the other hand, argued that the decree of the court below was fully justified and that the decree of injunction is not based on the mere violations of the rules of the Department of Health, but also upon evidence that the discharge of sewage into a stream is of itself a nuisance.

Soboleski, according to the proceedings in the court below, had approximately 800 pigs on his place and fed them garbage hauled from Philadelphia.

Court Adopts Resolutions
In Death of F. Gilkeson

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 14.—Appropriate resolutions on the death of Frank Gilkeson, Bristol attorney and World War veteran who was buried Monday were spread upon the records of the Court of Common Pleas here yesterday.

The resolutions signed by the committee composed of Thomas Ross, Henry A. James, Hugh B. Eastburn, J. Hibbs Buckman and Oscar O. Bean refer to Mr. Gilkeson's death as the loss of a member of the Bar "who was ever a courageous and fair opponent, a lovable associate and a zealous and honest advocate of his clients' causes."

"We admire and honor him for his sterling patriotism as exhibited by his enlistment and active military service on foreign fields in the World War, which service he gladly and proudly gave, although he was then beyond military age and the hardships he suffered took their toll of his strength and spirit."

The committee inscribed on the resolutions further, "that his services to his country as a legislator and to the town of his birth as the organizer and Chief of the Bristol Volunteer Fire Department were unselfish and inspiring, and that as one of the organizers and the first Commander of the Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, he gave his energy and ability to build an organization that has since stood as a leader in the community and social life of our county."

BRISTOL SCOUT TROOPS

Colored Troop and St. Ann's
Scouts Have Beneficial
Meeting

CHARTER IS PRESENTED

A greater spirit of fellowship and good will between Bristol's youth became evident when the colored Boy Scout Troop, Bristol No. 3, visited the newly-organized St. Ann's Troop, Bristol No. 8, last evening.

Scoutmaster Jones, the leader of the colored troop, hearing of the new troop that was underway, gathered together his Scouts and paid John Field and his boys a visit. While the two Scoutmasters were engaged in a discussion on Scouting the troops intermingled exchanging boy-to-boy motto and slogan. The colored Scouts offered to help the Italian Scouts along with their tenderfoot tests but this was unnecessary for John Field immediately had his boys perform in the Scout requirements to the delight and satisfaction of Bristol No. 3.

Scoutmaster Field has some great possibilities in the development of his troop. Thirteen boys have been registered, and a long waiting list established since the organization of this unit last month. The Bucks County Council, Boy Scouts of America, feel that this unit will not be long in coming to the front in activities and quality.

The colored Scout troop established a troop "good turn" last Sunday evening by installing into Scouting the new Langhorne colored troop. Assistant Scout Executive Robert K. Perry, after completing the organization of the Langhorne unit, received the right to charter this troop from the National

He attended the public schools in Bridgeton and in 1880 went with his uncle, A. H. Sickler and became engaged in the printing business in Philadelphia on Ludlow street, where the plant of the Franklin Printing Company is now located and with which the Sickler firm merged in 1923.

After the merger of the Sickler and Franklin firms Mr. Arnold continued with the latter organization for five years. Since that time he has lived retired.

SUE FOR LOSS OF COW

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 14.—Two damage suits, one of which is for the sum of $12,500 and another for damages amounting to $235, have been filed in the Prothonotary's office.

George and Elvira Slott, Fountain House, Doylestown, have entered a damage suit for $12,500 against James M. Miller, Philadelphia. It is alleged that Miller, while driving south on Main street toward the State street intersection proceeded to make a right hand turn into West State street, and that his car collided with the plaintiff's son, Joseph Slott, inflicting upon him serious injuries consisting of a compound fracture of one of his legs. The plaintiff aver that the car was negligently and carelessly operated.

Samuel Cissel, Philadelphia, has been sued for damage amounting to $235 by Mary Mack, Gardenville. The plaintiff alleges that Cissel was operating his motor vehicle on the Lackawanna Trail near Danboro, and negligently ran into her cow because he failed to give warning of his approach. Mrs. Mack avers that the collision resulted in such severe injuries to the cow that it was necessary to have it killed immediately after the collision. The market value of the cow was set at $250.

Complaint About Poaching
Brings Arrest by State
Troopers

ONLY ONE PAYS FINE

Six fishermen from Beverly, N. J., were fined a total of $950 and costs yesterday for illegal fishing along the Pennsylvania shore of the Delaware River.

Complaint was lodged against the men by Major Charles H. Smith, Edgely, who resides at his estate, Sunnyside-on-the-Delaware.

The six men, who reside at Beverly, were arrested by Corporal Deane and Trooper Christ, of the Morrisville barracks, who found them on Major Smith's estate. They were arraigned before Justice of the Peace James Laughlin, here.

The men are: John B. Estworthy and Robert Lowrie, fined $25 each for fishing out of season without a license; Joseph R. and Daniel VanSeiver, fined $200 each for using a fishing net and fishing out of season without a license, and Gilbert and Lawrence Jones, fined $225 on similar charges.

Declaring that "all I want is to be left alone," Major Smith, 67 years old, who was crippled during the World War while serving in the Commissary Department, told State Police that it was not his intention to prosecute the persons who have been sending him abusive and threatening letters, but that he wanted it stopped. He asked the authorities to try to locate the persons who are sending him the letters.

He further claimed that poachers have been using his property for the past few years, hurling similar abusive threats when he told them to leave. He reported that last June, while on a DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 14.—President Judge Calvin S. Boyer announced the appointment of the following Board of Viewers to serve for three years: Webster Grim, Doylestown; Harold G. Kittleman, Quakertown; Charles B. Ermentrout, Southampton; Ulysses G. Loux, Goryville; Leidy M. Landis, Plumstead township; George Reichley, Perkasie. Civil court adjourned until this morning when it was announced that a witness in a case scheduled for trial is ill in Philadelphia.

Judge Calvin S. Boyer directed a non-suit be entered in the damage suit brought by Mark G. Stauffer, through his father, Clayton C. Stauffer, of Richlandtown, against W. Norman Freed, of Richland township. The plaintiff brought suit as a result of injuries alleged to have been sustained in an automobile accident on Broad street, Quakertown, that Stauffer alleged were due to Freed's negligence.

After arguing for a non-suit, Attorney Harry E. Grim, of Perkasie, asked the court to dismiss the case. Robert G. Hendricks, of Doylestown, attorney for the plaintiff, replied that in his opinion a case of negligence had been made out. The Court commented briefly and stated that in his opinion it was not a case for the jury and directed a non-suit to be entered.

The case of Colonel Joseph W. Breen, of Philadelphia, head of the military organization, "The Forty-and-Eight" in Pennsylvania, against J. Harry Linaman, of Catasauqua, was continued until the next term of civil court.

In equity court, Judge Boyer handed down an opinion in the case of Cora B. Bunch, plaintiff, against Joseph E. Weaver and Addie M. Weaver, his wife, defendants, in which the Court ruled "all of the plaintiff's exceptions are dismissed and the decree nisi entered on October 6, 1930, is made absolute."

Masters were appointed in two divorce proceedings as follows: Clarence J. Buckman, of Langhorne, was appointed master in the case of Edith E. Spurr against Frank L. Spurr, and Asher K. Anders, of Doylestown, was appointed Master in the case of Blanche A. Joseph against Frank H. Joseph.

The law library committee headed by President Judge Hiram H. Keller submitted its report to be placed on the records of the Court of Common Pleas. The report showed an expenditure during 1930 amounting to $1553, and a balance on December 31, 1930, amounting to $199.74. During the year many new books were purchased and placed in the law library.

GRUDGES

Do you carry grudges? Cast them aside. Your burden in life is heavy enough without them.

Do you boast of your grudges as a sign that you are a free man? Don't do it. Though you may have created your grudges and though you may feed them, they are your masters. You may carry your grudge uphill through life, but it will carry you only down.

How often is heard a voice in violent impatience. Smith cries: "If Jones is for it, I am against it." Then Jones controls Smith's mind more firmly than if he were his closest friend.

It is not worth while to waste energies and vitiate minds in hatred and resentment. It is right to hate evil, but merely to pity evil men.

If you have been wronged, forget. You suffered enough at the time.

Do you long for revenge or to "get even" with some enemy, actual or imaginary? You magnify his triumph. You continue his ascendancy. You hypnotize yourself with in his spell.

It doesn't pay.

Many happinesses are shared by the least fortunate, and many misfortunes befall the happiest. None of us can well afford to spend hours of retrospect and prospect in other than the happiest memories and the brightest hopes that charity and love can summon.

COOPERATION

Modern civilization knows of only one game which all may play and in which all players are winners. That game is cooperation. In an era when the many are working for self the exceptional who works for others may seem to be depriving self. But nobody is deprived who works for others.

The stage driver who declined to exhibit his skill with the whip on a roadside hornet's nest knew the power of cooperation. Cooperation among the allies under Foch stemmed the advance of the German hordes.

Hornets work together. So do bees. A bee hive is a wonderful testimonial to what working together—each for all and all for each—can accomplish. Ants are also cooperators and every ant-hill testifies to the result-getting powers of cooperation. A wise man was once asked which is the most important—Labor, Capital or Management. He answered with a twinkle: "Which is the most important leg of a three-legged stool?"

Cooperation is the key word in business. It is the one direct road to prosperity, both for individuals and large groups. If a man is to be a leader, he first learns how to be a good cooperator—a worker with others; not a worker against nor for, but with.

Slowly man's inventiveness will knock everybody out of a job except the reformer.

Every man is capable of originating the ideas he has the capacity to comprehend.

Jazz bands usually carry a couple of fellows who get up and sing a refrain now and then, because the music seems refreshing when they stop.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Nancy Hollenbeck, young, vibrant and beautiful, becomes cynical toward love when she gives up Mat Tully at her mother's request because he is poor. She encourages the attentions of Jack Beamer, wealthy married man, who, enamored of Nancy, wishes to divorce his wife. On a mountain trip, Nancy falls in love with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Leaving her chaperones, the rich Porters, Nancy, after a violent but brief courtship, secretly marries Roger. Her folks at home wonder at her continued absence. In Reno on their honeymoon, Roger pleads with Nancy to write her mother of their marriage. Mrs. Hollenbeck learns of the return of Mrs. Porter. Doubts assail Nancy as she spends long, lonely days in Roger's rough mountain cabin. Mrs. McKimmons, a neighboring ranger's wife, invites Nancy to visit her. Nancy is troubled as she pictures herself growing to be like her. When Roger plans to go on a trip, Nancy begs him not to go.

CHAPTER XXIII.

IT helped to pass the time, dreaming about what Jack was doing. It was a sort of game, imagining herself at his side, taking her place as his wife. She would see herself, slim and golden and beautiful, dropping an emerald ring carelessly behind her at the horseshow, leaning forward in her glittering gorgeous gown to watch Jack's hunter take the blue ribbon. Riding in his low slung, powerful car, heedless of traffic cops, speeding. Wearing expensive, disarmingly simple tailor-mades, half smothered in silver fox furs. Just a game! She didn't want that life really. . . not if it would mean giving up Roger. . . Roger, her lover.

And she'd fly to the window and begin watching for him. . . hours before he could possibly return.

He never had to wait for his dinner. The table was always set, and the food dried up to a mere nothing, long before 6.

"Why don't you take Maggie and ride in the afternoons?" he asked her, over and over.

"I will sometime," she'd say evasively.

The truth was that she didn't enjoy riding alone. With him beside her she rode like a cowgirl, clattering down rocky chasms, racing around hairpin curves, heedless of danger, her eyes sparkling, her hair flying. . . part of the horse.

No Choice

Alone, she rode slowly, her eyes on the horse's ears, nervous, worried, picturing herself and the horse at the bottom of every cliff. And, besides, she'd always be wondering if he hadn't got home early, and turn back to make sure, before her ride had really begun.

One night he asked her again, "Don't you care to ride, Maggie?"

"Not particularly, alone."

He sucked on his pipe in silence for a long moment. "Then you won't care if I take her when I'm gone for two or three days with McKimmons?"

So he was going. He hadn't given up the idea after all.

"I don't care what you take, if you don't take me."

"I can't do that, Nancy."

"You could if you wanted to. There's no rule against it, is there?"

"Now, look here, honey, don't be babyish. I've put this thing off as long as I can. We've got to go now, in a day or so."

"I'm not babyish. I'm just telling you, I won't stay here without you."

"Now, now—Nancy!" He tried to touch her, to take her in his arms, but she slid through his fingers and evaded his grasp.

"Don't make it hard for me, girl!"

"Don't make it hard for ME. . . oh Roger, don't leave me. . . don't—please don't!"

She wept then, and he confronted her as he would a frightened child. "Don't cry, honey. . . it will be all right. . . don't cry." She waited, rigid, for his promise.

"Roger, don't leave me . . . please don't!"

Roger made no promise. He did not speak again of the trip with McKimmons.

"He won't really go," Nancy thought, watching him nervously all that night, and the next. She wanted to ask him again, to reassure herself, but that would be too much like nagging. She wouldn't do that.

Sometimes she caught him looking at her furtively, a faint pucker between his brows.

And at last it came. They had just finished dinner, he was lighting his pipe. "I'll have to leave pretty early in the morning," he said, puffing and scowling at the match. "That trip I told you about. . . Lord, I hate to go."

All the blood in her body seemed to rush to her head in a crimson wave, then it rushed away again leaving her white and cold.

"Then why do you go?" she asked very low.

"Oh, Nancy! You know I have to. It's my job!"

"In that case, there's nothing to say, is there?" She kept her head turned, so that he could not see her face.

"Nancy! Nancy girl, you know how I hate to go," he said reproachfully, and strode over to where she was standing in the doorway, watching the red sunset sky fade to pink, and an ashy gray. He put both arms around her, tilting her head back, so that he could see her face. She smiled faintly, and submitted limply to his kiss.

Baffled

"Come now, old lady! No sulking!" He roughed her hair, and shook her playfully, but in his heart he was afraid. She was so poised, so delicately beautiful. . . so strangely, achingly far away. His arms dropped to his side. He turned away embarrassed. He realized with sickening certainty that this great-lady manner so new to him was probably familiar enough to her friends, to her own people, to this fellow she had been engaged to. . .

The pipe went out. He lit another match and stared at it until it burnt his fingers.

Nancy was watching him out of brown, inimical eyes.

She got up before dawn to get his breakfast. Feeling like one of the younger and more beautiful Christian martyrs—St. Barbara, for instance, she washed in cold water, put on the green linen with the box pleats that took two hours to iron, and went into the kitchen.

Bacon and eggs and hot cakes. She would have made biscuits too if she could have found a cookbook, or remembered how. But she couldn't recall whether Louise used two cups of flour or two cups of milk, or toast had to do.

When it was all ready she called him.

"Say, this is something like! But gee, Nancy, you shouldn't have gone to all this trouble—"

"No trouble," she murmured, refilling his coffee cup. The perfect hostess, being charming to a bothersome guest.

The hot cakes stuck in his throat, he could hardly swallow.

"Maybe I can be back day after tomorrow," he said, after a long silence, when the crunching of toast sounded loud as cannon and the very ticking of the clock on the shelf was maddening. "I'll try awfully hard, and if I can't it will be only one day more. You aren't afraid?"

She was staring at her untasted coffee. "I don't know. I have never been left alone before." And then with a bubbling of the old fun: "This is my first honeymoon, you know—I'm only an amateur bride!"

She lifted her eyes, and laughed shakily.

The Test

"Oh, Nancy, Nancy—I CAN'T leave you!" He was crushing her so tightly that she half whimpered with the pain, even while she drew long, exultant breaths of victory.

But he did leave her. He put her aside gently. "Well, I must go, dear. McKimmons will be waiting for me at the summit. You will be all right, sweetheart. Nothing to harm you, and you can go over to Helen's for the night if you feel lonesome. I'm riding Maggie, but you could go around by the road in the car, or hike up the trail for that matter, it's just a step—you'll be all right!"

"Yes, I'll be all right," she forced herself to repeat after him. She waved until horse and rider were only a puff of dust in the smoky distance. Her lips were still parted in a frozen unnatural smile.

When she could no longer see or hear him she went back into the house and stood looking at it, as if she were seeing it for the first time. Roger's house. . . his books. . . his chairs. . . his brown army blankets. . .

A window slammed. The boards began to creak. Wave after wave of homesickness swept over her, and loneliness, bitter and cold.

Two days. . . two days and two nights. . .

"It's no use, I can't stand it!" she whispered. She began to walk around aimlessly, moving from room to room, wringing her hands.

"It's no use, I can't stand it. I wasn't meant for this kind of a life!"

Council, P. S. A. Rev. Willhite and Scoutmaster Jones took their Scouts to Langhorne last Sunday and put on a very impressive candle investiture ceremony. The troop's charter was presented by Troop Commissioner S. A. Miller, after which the boys from Bristol No. 3 performed and lighted a candle for each point of the Scout law as it was repeated. After the twelve parts of the Scout law were repeated Scoutmaster Jones explained to the Langhorne boys that the lighted candles were to be guiding lights in the life of each Scout for they stand for the ideals and principles of Scouting. The Langhorne Scouts then took the Scout oath and Mr. Jones pinned the badge of the tenderfoot Scout on each boy's breast, gave him the official handshake, and declared him a member of the Boy Scouts of America.

SPORT BUG

-GENE SARAZEN-

--WHO IS DEFENDING HIS TITLE IN THE $25000. AGUA CALIENTE TOURNAMENT--- THE FEATURE OF THE WINTER GOLF SEASON!

THE annual Agua Caliente $25,000 Golf Derby is at hand, with the sun-burnt and thoroughly seasoned Gene Sarazen prepared to repeat last year's victory, which will entail again a first prize of $10,000—the largest money award ever offered links talent. This will be the second golf derby arranged as a special feature attraction for those who patronize the growing Mexican sporting resort, where the whirl of thoroughbreds, wheels, cards and dice combine to afford gambling thrills galore.

Of course, in the most uncertain of all games, there is no assurance that the golfing gods will again pour their golden smiles on the masterly Sarazen—especially since the field will consist of about two-thirds of the world's very best pros, most of whom are now "hot" from all game angles.

Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente's home pro, was off form almost all last year but his touch appears to have returned and, if that be so, Sarazen is not likely to get that "hundred yards of golden fleece" Horton Smith, too, is about due for another dazzling coup; Olin Dutra is coming to the fore most formidably; and what if the lordly Walter Hagen picks this as the spot to return to greatness?

Wherever you glance among the entries—behold Tommy Armour, Al Espinosa, Harry Cooper, Macdonald Smith, et al.—you'll note talent capable of baffling Sarazen's second quest of that "ten grand" honorarium.

However, Sarazen should be the favorite to win. He and "Mac" Smith probably were the best of the pros on all-round performance throughout 1930. His current Winter tour play has been high grade. Gene, like most of the others, has been pointing for the Agua Caliente purse and he's one of the ablest of money players, all links critics agree. Think of shooting for $10,000 and a total of $15,000 in lesser prizes!

Pro golfers struck several significant signs of "depression" along the Pacific Coast this Winter, but at Agua Caliente the links are again loaded with golden apples, ready for harvesting by Sarazen, Diegel, the Smiths, their ilk, or some inspired unknown.

PITTSBURGH GOES OLD GOLD

BY BIG PLURALITY

Ripley CREAM OF "BELIEVE IT or NOT" PROVES IT

Famous Steel City gives O.G.s. Smashing Vote in latest Ripley Taste-Test

Believe it or not, taste is taste, whether its owner sports a dinner coat or a dinner pail.

I covered Pittsburgh from the Mayor's office to the sootiest, hottest steel mills. Gave every mother's son I met the four leading cigarettes with brand names concealed, and said "Try 'em!"

At the steel mills, OLD GOLD won . . . by 34%.
At the William Penn Hotel . . . O. G. won . . . by 32%.
At Police Headquarters, O. G. by 49%.

Blue bloods . . . red bloods . . . brain and brawn . . . they all like OLD GOLD's throat-ease and taste thrill.

Can't OLD GOLD lose? It hasn't yet.
